Thank you for your letter of May 5 with which you enclosed a copy of your paper, [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] We have read your paper with interest and were pleased to note that its principal conclusions are quite consistent with our own research findings in nearly all important respects. Your courtesy in sending this paper is appreciated and I hope you will continue your inquiries into this very important subject.

I am pleased to confirm your impression that some of the research done by CIA may be made available to people outside the Government. In the past several months we have made a few such papers available to a selected number of people in the academic world whose professional interests parallel our own. I am enclosing copies of two such papers and have requested that your name be placed on the mailing list to receive any further papers of this kind which we are able to make available. In this connection you will note they are marked FOR OFFICIAL USE ONLY; this means that while we are happy to make these available for your personal use, they may not be reproduced nor cited in nongovernment publications. I hope you will find these papers of interest.

Sincerely,

/s/

Robert Amory, Jr.
